

Guidelines for contributors

We welcome articles in English, French, German, Spanish or Catalan.

Generally speaking, 200 – 700 words. Longer texts can be split into separate articles.

Style

- Articles tend to be more personal and less academic than other typical specialist content, written in the first person and aimed at a general readership.
- Regarding text format, we do not use bold letters to emphasise words or use slashes – / – to mark alternatives.
- We tend to avoid complex layouts and long sentences.
- Articles should contain links to other items of interest that can be consulted on the web.
- Articles should contain at least one usable (not pirated) image for illustrative purposes.
- Articles should be signed by a single author, whose brief profile on Tradiling (photo and text) should be up-to-date.
- If in doubt, the simplest option is usually the most elegant.

Suggestions for topics

- Reviews Reflections on the translation profession, on translators, and professional anecdotes, etc. of books not yet translated into Spanish or Catalan, preferably recently published.
- Reflections on teaching or professional practice.
- Reports on congresses, conferences and other events, or stays at other centres.
- Recommended reading in linguistics or literature.
- Reflections on language and cultural phenomena.
- Reflections on the translation profession, on translators, and professional anecdotes, etc.